A NEW USE OF OSTRICH.

The late winter millinery brings out some very novel effects which are so striking in effect that they bid fair to find their way into the spring models. One particularly noticeable model shows the crown of a large rolling brim shape entirely covered with white ostrich feathers. This trimming is in the form of narrow bands sewed flat to the shape. The underbrim is faced with black velvet, and on the right side where the brim dips rather sharply a bunch of violets is posed on the edge of the brim.
